Schools cancel 3 weeks as area braces for arrival of COVID-19

By COLLIN OVERTON
Courier Staff Writer

All Jefferson County schools have canceled in-person classes for the next three weeks as the area braces for COVID-19 and attempts to mitigate the potential spread of the pandemic.

Superintendents with Madison, Southwestern and Prince of Peace schools met with Dr. John Hossler, Jefferson County Health officer, Friday morning to determine a course of action, according to a joint statement from all three school corporations. School was in session for all three districts Friday but excused medical absences were given to Madison students whose parents called in saying they did not feel it was safe to send kids to school that day, according to a release from Madison Schools Thursday.

Christian Academy of Madison and Canaan Community Academy will also be closed for the next three weeks, the Jefferson County Health Department said Friday.

"It is a decision that was not entered into lightly, and was a combined effort between the schools present and the Jefferson County Health Department, represented by the county health officer," the joint statement said. "We hope that this effort to mitigate the spread of COVID-19 will have a positive effect on the overall impact to our community, in the long run."

Shelves normally stacked high with toilet paper, paper towels and cleaning supplies have been picked clean by shoppers at local department stores — a trend being reported throughout the country — as residents prepare for a COVID-19 pandemic that is canceling schools, colleges and community events across the nation. Southwestern already had the next two weeks scheduled off for spring break and will now not hold face-to-face classes the week of March 30 through April 3. Spring break at Madison and Prince of Peace is scheduled for March 23-27 and will fall between the weeks both school districts have opted to shut down. Extracurriculars and all other school-related activities are canceled until the districts resume classes on a normal schedule, effective Saturday, the joint release said.

Each school notified families about their specific academic and district-related plans for online learning and the use of state-issued waiver days.

Madison will have four waiver days March 16, 17, 30 and 31 and six eLearning days with assignments due in between. Students without internet access at home can pick up paper packets with assignments Tuesday, March 17 beginning at noon and Wednesday, March 18 during normal school hours. Students who were not at school Friday can pick up their eLearning devices during the same times.

Prince of Peace will hold eight "virtual learning" days the weeks before and after spring break and will only be off two days during those

School Cancellation at a glance

- Area schools will essentially cancel 2 weeks of classes plus be out for their spring breaks
- Students will take home packets for study or be expected to participate in eLearning (online devices and/or internet access will be provided for some students who do not have that at home)
- Students who rely on school breakfasts and lunches will have meals made available on a take-home basis
- School district leadership in Jefferson County and the Jefferson County Health Department will meet again on April 1 to evaluate the situation and determine next course of action.

COVID-19 Local Response

Here are some helpful tips and local developments in response to the COVID-19 pandemic.

How to stay safe

According to recommendations from the Jefferson County Health Department and the Indiana State Department of Health, you should:

- Wash your hands thoroughly and frequently. If soap and water are not readily available, use a hand sanitizer that contains at least 60% alcohol.
- Cough and sneeze into your elbow or a tissue then immediately wash your hands.
- Stay home when you are sick.
- Avoid close contact with individuals who are ill and maintain at least a six-foot distance from others when you are out in public, if possible
- Clean and disinfect frequently touched surfaces daily
- See your doctor if you think you are ill

Governor Issues Plan

Gov. Eric Holcomb issued the state's plan for combating the virus Thursday night, urging the following recommendations:

- Don't congregate in groups larger than 250 people, such as cafeterias, churches and stadiums.
- Child care and adult day care facilities should institute social distancing and minimize large gatherings
- Nursing facilities and hospitals should restrict and/or screen visitors. Anyone who is allowed to visit is restricted to the patient's room
- Businesses should allow employees to work from home, if possible
- Senior centers and congregate meal services should consider suspending congregate meal

Glad to be back home in Indiana as pandemic hits Italy

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer

Local couple Ted and Marni Todd recently visited Italy, which is now the epicenter of the COVID-19 pandemic

At about the same moment the President issued a ban on air travel from Europe to the United States, Ted and Marni Todd received word that the plane bringing their granddaughter home from Italy had just touched down in Chicago.

With news spreading that Europe had become the new epicenter of the COVID-19 pandemic and hospitals in Italy's hardest-hit region overwhelmed with the sick and the dead, having their loved one home was a moment of relief for the Todds.

Ted Todd, a retired judge from Jefferson County, and Marni Todd, a local business person, had made their own departure from Italy several days earlier after visiting their granddaughter there just as things were starting to heat up on COVID-19. Since then, the coronavirus has stopped Italy in its tracks with more than 15,000 cases of the virus and more than 1,000 dead.

When the Todds arrived in Italy to visit their granddaughter, a Butler University student who was spending a semester studying abroad, the virus was already in the news but communities were just starting to see their first cases and trying to get a handle on what the impact would be.

"February was the perfect time to travel, before the tourist season, so the crowds were much smaller ... I definitely wouldn't be going today." – Marni Todd

"When we arrived it was just starting to become an issue but when we left they were starting to get real serious about it." – Ted Todd

Fast-forward to now and the country's restaurants, cafes and retail shops have closed in a lockdown on personal movement, although grocery stores, pharmacies and markets are allowed to operate. There are quarantines, empty town squares and hospitals overflowing.

The Todds departed Italy safely — neither has shown any signs of the virus — but the jury is still out on whether they escaped to a safer place as the coronavirus continues its spread throughout the world with the first cases now showing up in Indiana.

"We did not see much of it over there. There weren't a lot of people wearing facemasks and things like that," Marni Todd said. "It was so different than it is now today, but that was two or three weeks ago. There weren't a lot of people out at places. The crowds weren't all that big but there were still people out. You see pictures now and places are empty.

"February was the perfect time to travel, before the tourist season, so the crowds were much smaller," she said. "I definitely wouldn't be going today."

"When we arrived it was just starting to

Man gets 50 years in doctor's killing

INDIANAPOLIS — A 19-year-old man who pleaded guilty in the fatal shooting of a prominent doctor was sentenced to 50 years in prison after telling a judge that he "got railroaded." Devon Seats agreed in January to plead guilty to murder and three counts of burglary in the November 2017 slaying of Dr. Kevin Rodgers. He was sentenced Thursday after trying unsuccessfully last month to back out of that plea deal and proceed to trial instead. A Marion County judge sentenced Seats to 50 years on the murder charge and eight-year terms on each of the burglary charges, to be served concurrently, The Indianapolis Star reported. Seats had admitted breaking into Rodgers' home and shooting him to death, according to court documents. He told the court Thursday that he felt he was treated unfairly, and was unhappy with his counsel. "I didn't have a fair shake because everything was against me. I got railroaded," Seats said. Three other co-defendants had previously pleaded guilty in connection with Rodgers' slaying. The 61-year-old Rodgers was the program director emeritus of the emergency medicine residency at the Indiana University School of Medicine, and was also the president of the American Academy of Emergency Medicine. Gov. Eric Holcomb posthumously awarded Rodgers the Sagamore of the Wabash, the state's highest civilian honor, in May 2018, saying that he lived an "exemplary life."

16-year-old pleads guilty to killing siblings

INDIANAPOLIS — A teenager charged as an adult has pleaded guilty Wednesday to two counts of murder in the August shooting deaths of two siblings. Lometreus Sanders, 16, was sentenced to 40 years in prison followed by five years of supervision by the Indiana Department of Corrections. Sanders was charged in the deaths of 16-year-old Nicholas Nelson, 16, and his sister, Ashlynn Nelson, 15, at their home in an apartment complex on Indianapolis' east side. According to prosecutors, Sanders went to the teens' home to meet with Ashlynn with whom he had been communicating. While at the home, a struggle occurred and Sanders shot and killed Ashlynn and Nicholas. Sanders, who was 15 at the time of the slayings, initially was charged in juvenile court. Marion County Prosecutor Ryan Mears says imposing the 45-year sentence, ``recognizes the delicate balance of sentencing a 15-year-old for these crimes."

Girl, 13, jailed for arson, attempted murder

WEST LAFAYETTE — A 13-year-old girl has been sentenced to an Indiana Department of Correction juvenile facility after admitting to charges of attempted murder and arson. The girl learned her punishment Tuesday for the Jan. 8 fire near West Lafayette. A family was inside the home but escaped safely. Fire officials said the home was a total loss. Police said the suspected motive was a dispute between the girl and another girl who lived at the home. The two girls attend the same school and live near each other. Under Indiana law, how long a sentenced juvenile serves behind bars is determined by the Department of Corrections, based on the youth's progress.

Kentucky sees increase in GED after fee waiver

FRANKFORT — Kentucky has seen a spike in the number of people signing up for GED testing after Gov. Andy Beshear announced in January the fees would be waived. The governor's office said there has been an 81% increase in the number of signups for the testing, and a 38% increase in those who have earned a GED diploma. "We removed one financial barrier to education and we are quickly seeing great results that are truly helping many Kentucky families," Beshear said. The governor's office said about 335,000 Kentuckians don't have a high school diploma or GED equivalent. The governor's office said between January and March, an average of 1,230 Kentuckians per month are in the process of seeking a GED diploma, compared to 678 for the same period in 2019. So far, 735 people have earned a GED diploma in 2020 compared to 533 people for the same period in 2019. The Education and Workforce Development Cabinet allotted $600,000 in state funding to waive test fees in an effort to eliminate financial barriers to the testing.

Panel announces nominees for court seat

FRANKFORT — Two attorneys and a judge have been nominated to fill a judicial vacancy on the Kentucky Court of Appeals. The Judicial Nominating Commission announced on Thursday that the nominees are James Richard "Jason" Coltharp Jr. of Paducah, Joe Christopher "Chris" McNeill of Paducah and C. Rene Williams of Dixon. The person chosen will serve on the 1st Appellate District, Division 1, which is composed of 24 counties in western Kentucky. Williams has served as a Circuit Court judge for the 5th Judicial Circuit for 15 years and is the chief regional circuit judge for the Purchase Region. McNeill has served with the Kentucky Department of Public Advocacy for 19 years and has managed the department's trial office since 2003. Coltharp has served as a defense attorney for civil cases for nearly 16 years. The governor has 60 days to appoint one of the nominees to succeed Christopher Shea Nickell, who was elected in November to the Supreme Court.

Officer serving warrant wounded, suspect killed

LOUISVILLE — A police officer was shot and wounded and a suspect killed Friday morning during a narcotics investigation, authorities said. Detectives were serving a warrant at a home in Louisville when they were fired upon, Metro Police Assistant Chief Joshua Judah told news outlets. The officers returned fire, he said. One officer was shot and taken to the University of Louisville Hospital with what appear to be non-life-threatening injuries. One suspect died at the scene and a second suspect was taken into custody. More information was not immediately released.

Former jailer sentenced to jail on perjury charge

PADUCAH — A former jailer has been sentenced to spend a year in jail after being convicted of perjury. Graves County Circuit Judge Tim Stark told former McCracken County Jailer Tonya Ray during her sentencing on Thursday that public officials have to be held accountable, The Paducah Sun reported. He said a sentence of probation would "unduly depreciate the seriousness of the offense." A jury convicted Ray in January on one count of perjury. She was charged with lying under oath about jail policies that would have been in place when former jail deputy Ben Green was charged with official misconduct. The question centered around whether the jail was following policies from a manual dated 2010 or 2012. Stark said he would "look favorably" on any request for shock probation, which can be filed 30 days after incarceration.

Vintage 'Hoosiers' school bus still rolling

By KASSIE RITMAN
Lebanon Reporter

How many of us indulge in the guilty pleasure of watching the movie "Hoosiers," not for the story line, but rather for "extras" spotting? We stop-frame the film to point out familiar faces and cheer at the sight of Lebanon's Memory Hall, as the floor gleams on the screen and we recognize the beloved gymnasium at the old Lebanon High School.

There is another large local star in the movie as well, one that most have never heard the story of, until now.

In 1939, a brand new Chevy 1.5-ton, chassis and cab, rolled off the assembly line and headed to the Wayne Company where it was fitted with a "school bus" back end. It was destined for use by the public schools of Indianapolis.

Within a couple of years, the bus was purchased by Lebanon Schools where it shuttled children from home to school, and back again, until 1949. Then, somehow, it found its way to a junkyard in Mace – a pretty little spot on the map in neighboring Montgomery County. It was there that mechanic and gunsmith Jack Baker saw the bus.

Jack had recently spent some years commuting to Allison's in Indianapolis during the war effort, and was just then back in New Ross full time. His Baker roots were deep in that corner of the county. Jack's family had owned the 160-acre tract that was their farm since the original land grant was made in 1830. Now retired and longing to travel, he thought the bus would make a fine vehicle for the family to use for cross country sightseeing.

He purchased it from the scrapyard, hauled it back to his own shop and began outfitting it for leisure travel. First off, he put a Hick's bus body on the old frame. A Hicks was the creme' de la creme' of bus bodies. Born in 1895, Earl Hicks grew up in Lebanon and worked alongside his father in a furniture factory. As the advent of the automobile influenced most everything in Indiana, Hicks and a partner (John F. Cline) went into the business of manufacturing and repairing tops for automobiles.

By 1921 they were also building "school wagons" at their workshop at 418 W. South St., Lebanon. By 1923, they were a full-time bus building concern. As it turned out, Hicks was an innovator of design. He patented many of the safety features still used on school buses today. Among these inventions are the "stop arm," signalling motorists that children are crossing. Earl Hicks also held a patent for the first break-away escape windows installed on school buses. All told, he registered about a dozen safety-related innovation patents that were immediately available on a Hicks Bus body.

Jack Baker set to work adding curtains, an icebox, stove, bed, seating and other creature comforts for family-sized touring. Soon the Bakers were traveling to far-flung destinations in the bus. Three generations packed up and spent summers together as they road-tripped to places like Texas, Oklahoma and Mississippi. Recently, grandson of Jack, Darryll Baker, mused that they must have looked like a bunch who could be labeled somewhere between the Beverly Hillbillies and the Partridge family.

In 1985, a crew was scouting for sites and venues for the filming of "Hoosiers." They were also searching madly for a team bus to transport the mythical Hickory team across the backroads of Indiana portrayed on the silver screen. They checked prop lots in Hollywood, museums in the Midwest, collector car clubs – all to no avail. Then one day a local guy said, "Well heck, Jack Baker over in New Ross has one of those old buses." Director David Anspaugh and writer Angelo Pizzo were thrilled. For the loan of the bus (which had to be converted from the family land cruiser back to a bus) Jack was paid $800.

Years passed and the bus of course was back at home in New Ross with Jack Baker, when he decided to make the next move of his retirement. Oklahoma was the place that Grandpa Jack wanted to spend his golden years. He sold the bus to a pal, Charles Bronaugh and wife Helen. Still bearing the Hickory markings, the Bronaughs exhibited the bus at local and state fairs, and drove it in parades and for special events. In 1994 when Charlie passed away, the bus was parked under a lean-to where it sat untouched and thus un-maintained.

Meanwhile, Darryll Baker came home from one of his many deployments across the globe working for the U.S. Foreign Service. Since graduating from Lebanon High School, Darryll's career had kept him far away from Indiana for many years. When he returned home in 1996 after 10 years of living in South America, he was horrified to hear that Grandpa Jack had sold the bus, thinking that no one in the family would want it.

Except, he hadn't asked Darryll.

Darryll called Helen, the owner of the beloved bus, and asked her if she'd like to sell it. Helen informed him that yes, she was already in negotiations with two interested parties. The bus had not moved since Charlie passed away, and there was no point in letting it rot in place. She went on to apologize to Darryll, explaining that she had pledged that the bus would go to whoever came out as the highest bidder between the coach of the Milan basketball team and the Indiana Basketball Hall of Fame. Helen would not budge

Crestfallen, Darryll asked if he could at least bring his Grandpa Jack (then 91 years old) by to visit the old bus one last time before it was sold. Helen agreed. On an August day in 1996, the Baker men showed up to survey their old four-wheeled friend. Jack carefully made his way up the bus steps and took up his familiar seat at the wheel. Helen watched as Jack stared off as if piloting the old bus along a lane of beloved memories. Darryll recalled that there was a definite twinkle in his grandfather's eye as he sat in that driver's seat.

And that's all it took, Helen and Darryll shook hands, and the bus was back in the Baker family.

About four years and untold amounts of cash later, the bus was up and running again. She had passed through the skilled hands of a retired Indy Car mechanic in Russellville (Terry Nichols) and a magical bodywork man in English (Dale Roll). Finally Darryll was able to drive the bus from South Bend all the way to Washington, D.C., in August of 2000.

The bus has been featured in car shows and parades for several years now. Perhaps most notably as a symbolic team bus for the Indiana Pacers when they honored the 30th anniversary of the release of the movie "Hoosiers" by donning "Hickory" uniforms for 10 of their games in 2015. The Hickory jerseys have continued to make appearances in the seasons since they were first introduced.

Darryll Baker, who lives with the bus in the D.C. area, is now looking at retirement himself. Chances are good that the bus is headed back home to Indiana when that happens. But no matter where Darryll and his wife land for their golden years, the Baker bus will stay with them.

Kentucky auditor wants additional transparency in use of state aircraft

By BRUCE SCHREINER
Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Kentucky's auditor called for greater transparency on use of state aircraft by elected officials as he reported that most flights taken by the former governor lacked documentation on their purpose.

Most of those flights were on aircraft operated by Kentucky State Police, and under state law the purpose of those flights doesn't have to be documented, state Auditor Mike Harmon said Thursday.

"Law enforcement flight activities need to remain confidential and undisclosed, but flights transporting government officials do not require the same level of privacy," Harmon said in his report.

"Though these flights are not law enforcement missions, KSP flights transporting officials, including the governor and lieutenant governor, are not explicitly required to comply with statutory flight information requirements," he added.

Harmon's report stems from a review of the use of state aircraft by former Gov. Matt Bevin and former Lt. Gov. Jenean Hampton between January 2016 and September 2019. Bevin and Hampton left office in December.

Only 16 of 309 flights billed to the governor's office during that time had their purpose documented, Harmon said. Bevin's use of the state aircraft came under media scrutiny during last year's campaign, when he was unseated by Democratic Gov. Andy Beshear.

The auditor on Thursday urged state lawmakers to pass legislation to enhance transparency when elected officials take flights on state aircraft. Lawmakers are in the final weeks of this year's session.

"This report should serve as a basis for improving transparency and accountability when it comes to our state airplanes and how elected leaders use them," Harmon said.

Harmon said he reviewed the use of aircraft operated by state police and the state Transportation Cabinet's Capital City Aircraft Division. Aircraft operated by state police were used on 289 of the 309 flights. None of those 289 flights had a documented purpose, the auditor said. Those flights cost more than $800,000.

While not required by law, Bevin's administration created and used an allocation form during his term to document the percentage of official and nonofficial flight time and calculate reimbursement amounts for nonofficial flights, the auditor said.

Those internal forms, however, were not provided to state police or the Transportation Cabinet, which would "offer an added layer of transparency in the process," Harmon said.

"Unlike flights for law enforcement purposes, protection from disclosure requirements shouldn't extend to the use of taxpayer owned and funded aircraft by their elected leaders for both official and non-official business," he said. "That is why I'm advocating for changes in law by the General Assembly that will create a consistent way to disclose the purpose of flights by the governor and lieutenant governor."

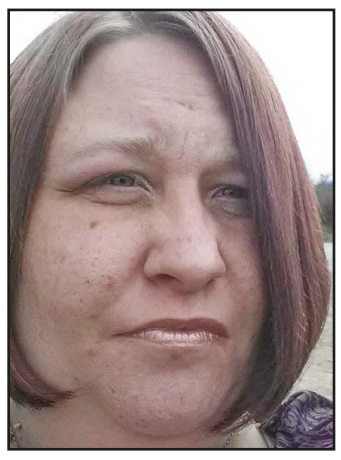
Missing woman found alive after Switzerland Co. search

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer

A Switzerland County woman who had been missing since Wednesday evening was found by a concerned neighbor, as search and rescue personnel searched and dragged a pond and combed an area along Markland Pike near East Enterprise Thursday afternoon.

According to Switzerland County Chief Deputy Chris Carry, Jessica Ledbetter, 33, was last seen walking toward East Enterprise by a passing motorist at about 4:30 a.m. Wednesday. A resident of the area, Ledbetter was thought to be in danger because she suffers from mental issues, was off her medications and was last reported wearing pajamas, a blue top and possibly barefooted.



Jessica Ledbetter

After failing to locate Ledbetter Thursday morning, a search was organized involving members of Texas Equusearch Midwest Chapter out of Ohio, which uses tracking dogs from K-9 International to look for missing persons, as well as the Jeff-Craig Fire Department and Switzerland County Emergency Response.

Handlers and their hounds began working an area about 2.5 miles south of East Enterprise at about 1 p.m. Thursday under a threatening sky from the heavy rain that would arrive at about the time the search ended. Dogs led rescuers to a farm pond on one side of Markland Pike as well as a wooded area on the other side of the road. As divers searched the pond, a neighbor on an ATV returned from the woods in the other direction at about 4:45 p.m. and said she had located Ledbetter.

"They actually started to drag (the pond) a little bit when one of the searchers decided to go up the road on her four-wheeler and noticed her in the woods," Rader said of the search.

Ledbetter was assisted out of the woods, checked by EMS and then transported to King's Daughters' Hospital in Madison to be treated for exposure. A release by Switzerland County Sheriff Brian L. Morton said she was in stable condition.

"She's alive and everything else will work it's way out. She's got a new lease on life and EMS is taking care of her and she's going to be transported to the hospital for evaluation," Rader added. "This is a great outcome and it was right before the rain started so who knows what the outcome could have been after another night."

Rader, whose group has assisted Switzerland County and other communities with a number of searches in the past, said Thursday's operation was an "all hands type effort" with six dogs, handlers and divers, but positive outcomes like finding Ledbetter alive is the reward for that effort.

"Today a miracle happened," he said.

The Voter Registration Office will also be open for voting on two Saturdays — April 25 and May 2 — from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Satellite voting locations will be provided on six days between April 14 and April 30, with sites on both Madison's hilltop and in Hanover. Unlike precincts, the Voter Registration Office and satellite voting locations can accept voters from any area of the county.

One of the satellite precincts will be located at the Jefferson County Emergency Management Agency, 620 Green Road, Madison. That site will be open from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. on April 14, 16, 21, 23, 28 and 30. The other satellite site will be at Hanover Park, 200 Spruce Lane, Hanover. That site will also be open from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. on April 15, 22 and 29.

"Any voter from Jefferson County can vote at either location," said a release by Jefferson County Clerk Tabatha Eblen. "For clarification, everyone can take advantage of early voting. There does not have to be a reason to cast an early vote."

For more information, call the Clerk's Office at 812-265-7614.

Faster testing for COVID-19

After slow start, private labs in Indiana allowed to help test

SOUTH BEND — If you have symptoms such as fever, cough, sore throat and shortness of breath, and fear you have the coronavirus, you might assume you can quickly get a test to find out.

But it hasn't been that simple in Michiana and throughout Indiana.

The Indiana State Department of Health last week received only enough test kits from the federal Centers for Disease Control & Prevention to test about 100 people, so it is restricting tests to people who had prolonged exposure to someone who was infected or who recently traveled to countries with high infection rates.

"One challenge has been the availability of testing throughout the state," said Dr. Mark Fox, St. Joseph County's deputy health officer. "The bigger challenge, frankly, is they follow a very strict protocol on determining who should be tested."

As of late Wednesday, the state agency, which can turn around test results in 24 hours, had tested only 43 people.

Megan Wade-Taxler, an ISDH spokeswoman, declined Wednesday to say how many test kits were left. She said the agency has requested more from the CDC but she did not reply via email when asked when they might be delivered.

Under growing pressure to test more people faster, the state agency has started allowing private commercial labs Quest Diagnostics and LabCorp to process tests, with projected turnaround times of three to five days.

Fox estimated that 50 to 60 people in St. Joseph County had been tested though commercial labs. The county's first confirmed case, announced Wednesday, came from a commercial lab that received the patient's sample Monday, a two-day turnaround.

Still, State Rep. Ryan Dvorak, D-South Bend, said he's heard of commercial lab tests taking five days.

"Obviously, the commercial labs are better than nothing, but it is appalling that our state has effectively zero testing capability," Dvorak said. "This is a gross failure caused by cascading failures throughout the system. I hope it gets better, and it probably will, but the most important time has passed."

Dvorak said he is especially attuned to the crisis because his brother, Brett, is stationed as a consular officer with the U.S. Foreign Service in Milan, Italy, a country that has virtually shut down amid a severe coronavirus outbreak.

"He's just witnessing firsthand how this has completely crippled the entire country," Dvorak said.

So who should be tested? It's a tough question that doctors are grappling with, said Dr. Brian Huber, medical director of South Bend Clinic's Immediate Care Center in Mishawaka.

"Right now, everybody thinks they have coronavirus," Huber said. "It's really a lot of screening right now, as to who do we really think has it. Who can we test and who can we reassure that you have flu or some other common thing going around the community right now?"

Saint Joseph Health System, Beacon Health System and South Bend Clinic have their own protocols to determine who gets tested and how it happens. But they've met and agreed on some common goals, Huber said.

"First, keep people out of the emergency room that don't need to be there," Huber said. "The emergency rooms in circumstances like this really need to be for people who are basically very sick and probably require hospitalization, not people that want to be tested, not people that want to know if they have the infection. This is what we're setting up different sites around the city for."

The South Bend Clinic is collecting test samples at its Immediate Care facility on Day Road in Mishawaka. Huber said people with symptoms should first call their primary care doctor or the clinic's coronavirus hotline (574-307-6870). Doctors are then interviewing people via Skype or FaceTime and, if they think testing is warranted, are sending the patients to the Day Road facility, where a health care worker in protective gear meets them at their vehicle and collects a cheek swab.

"You don't have any risk of spreading infection to us, the health care workers, but also minimizing risk to other patients," Huber said. "If you go into a waiting room with 50 people right now, that's not where you want to be."

South Bend Clinic screened about 30 people Monday and about 50 Tuesday, taking test samples from at least 15 people.

Beacon is taking cheek swab samples inside select facilities, with providers wearing protective gear, separate from areas where other patients are. The hospital is initially screening people over the phone, said Dr. Dale Patterson, Beacon's vice president of medical affairs.

But Beacon might move to video link screening, called "telehealth," as more people are confirmed to have the virus.

"As we see more activity and we have more need for treatment and answering questions and assessing patients, we expect we will ramp that service up and use it more," Patterson said.

Genevieve Lankowicz, chief medical officer at Saint Joseph, said the health system is screening by phone and collecting cheek swabs from patients in vehicles.

"If they're a little sicker and we want to take them inside, then we put a mask on them. We have a certain route, they're not walking through the waiting room," Lankowicz said. "So far when we've had to do the evaluations, we were able to do them in the cars."

At the hospital, patients call ahead, are given a mask and are routed to rooms with negative pressure, meaning they don't exchange air with the rest of the hospital.

For people who might want to be tested but don't have primary care physicians, the three health systems are partnering to create a hotline, something they hope will be ready later this week.

become an issue but when we left they were starting to get real serious about it," Ted Todd said.

Fortunately for the Todds, they were primarily in a part of the country not hit by the hardest outbreaks of the COVID-19. They traveled through some areas that were harder hit with a side-trip to Vienna, Austria, but saw nobody with any symptoms of the illness.

When the Todds re-entered Italy from Austria, they and others were spot checked before being allowed back, but that was as close as they got to any intervention on their ability to move freely while in the country.

"They spot checked us to see if we had a temperature when we came back from Austria," Ted Todd said. "They were taking it serious by that time but for the most part everybody there was being very responsible."

Marni Todd thinks that being responsible probably played a key role in the Todds coming through an area that is now so hard-hit with such a heavy toll of sick and dying without repercussion, and it could be a big key on how well people in this country survive the pandemic that is now emerging.

She said they both exercise sanitary precautions — not just while traveling abroad, but all the time — and keep their distance from others as much as possible.

"We wash our hands a lot and use hand sanitizer," Marni Todd said, noting that diligent hand washing and maintaining distance socially have been promoted as two keys for not contracting COVID-19 or any other communicable illness for that matter. "I just think everybody should do the things they are doing now — like washing their hands often — all the time."

Americans preparing now for what is still the unknown have already stripped store shelves of sanitizers, bleach, toilet paper and tissues hoping to do battle against the coming germs. Marni Todd said she saw some of that, too, in Italy as they prepared for what was then unknown.

"I went into a store here to buy some things and this was incredible," she said. "They were starting to do some of that there, but their stores are not stocked like ours in the first place. I finally found a pharmacy there that had some hand sanitizer."

Having seen some of the progression of COVID-19 in Europe and the arrival of the virus here in the U.S., Ted Todd says local people need to take the coronavirus serious. Following sanitation guidelines and practices like hand washing, keeping your distance from others and staying home if you're sick will help, but it's still not going to be easy and we're all in for a rough time, he said.

He said it's encouraging to see local officials taking precautions and implementing protocols but noted "we're still farther behind than we should have been."

He also noted that pandemics like COVID-19 impact more than just the sick. The closing of schools and daycares has repercussions on business and industry, spreading the impact of the situation far beyond just those who are sick.

"When you close all public schools at least one parent is going to have to stay home from work with the children," Ted Todd noted. "When those people do that it's going to impact your workforce."

The virus could take weeks to run its course — experts have indicated a smaller outbreak over a longer period would be less taxing on the country's health services than a massive outbreak all at once — so people have to prepare for the long haul.

At the same time, more than half of the world's 128,000 people infected have already recovered. Most patients have only mild or moderate symptoms such as a fever or cold, though severe symptoms including pneumonia can occur, especially in older adults and people with existing health problems.

weeks, the district said in its own separate release Friday. Prince of Peace announced earlier on Thursday that Shawe Memorial Jr./Sr. High School students will work on school-issued Chromebooks and Pope John Elementary students who do not have computers at home would be given devices to use in the event of a shutdown.

"This decision has been made at the request of the Archdiocese of Indianapolis and in conjunction with our local health department and all of the school districts in Jefferson County. The leadership team of Prince of Peace Catholic Schools agrees with their assessment and this decision, and we plan to do everything within our power to follow it," Shawe Principal Curt Gardner said.

Southwestern Superintendent Jeff Bates said in another release specific to that district that additional information for families will be announced on the district's Facebook page and their "normal avenues used to disseminate information" in the coming days.

"I realize this will put you in a tough spot and I sincerely apologize for any inconvenience/hardship this may cause," Bates said. "We are following the recommendations of health officials and are hoping that, by taking these precautions, we can help prevent the spread of COVID-19."

Across the river in Kentucky, Trimble County Schools said Friday it would cancel classes for two weeks, aim to return the week of March 30 through April 3 and close school again for spring break the week of April 6-10. School was in session Friday as students were given "Raider Day" coursework packets to take home and complete over the next 10 school days. All extracurricular activities will be suspended until further notice, according to the announcement.

"If it is recommended that schools should remain closed for a longer period of time ... then Trimble County Schools will follow that recommendation. The safety and well-being of our students, staff and community is our number one priority and we will follow the advice of the experts in response to this Pandemic Situation," Superintendent Jessica Wilcoxson said in a release.

Neighboring Carroll County Schools announced a day earlier on Thursday that it would close for 15 schools days from Monday, March 16 through April 10 and issue online assignments for those days.

Food preparation is something each district plans to address as some students rely on school lunch and breakfast as their primary or only sources of nutrition throughout the week.

Madison will provide grab-and-go lunches on the Mondays and Wednesdays of both school weeks. The schedule for pickup is Monday, March 16; Wednesday, March 18; Monday, March 30; and Wednesday, April 1 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the main lobby of each student's school. Students will pick up two meals on Mondays and three meals on Wednesdays to account for every day of the week, Madison's communications coordinator Ashley Schutte said.

To reserve a meal for a student, parents are asked to either complete a Google reservation form or call the main office of their child's school. They'll be asked to provide their student's first and last name, school that they'll be picking up lunch from, student ID code if possible and dates that a lunch will be picked up.

Trimble County will provide pick-up meals to students from noon to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday at the Jr./Sr. high school and Milton Elementary School and include breakfast for the following day. Parents and students are advised to stay in their cars during the pick-up process and those who do not have transportation and are unable to access one of the sites can request delivery at 502-255-3201.

Carroll County will also provide pick-up meals at the high school from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. each school day, Superintendent Danny Osbourne said in a release. Breakfast for the next day will be included in the bag.

Prince of Peace and Southwestern both said in releases Friday that they were working on meal plans for students in need during the shutdown.

The closings will undoubtedly put a strain on parents who no longer have someone to watch their children while they go to work. Darlisa Davis, who runs a daycare on Green Road, said she is already at her capacity of 16 children as licensed by the state.

Davis has run the daycare for more than 26 years and said she doesn't plan to shut down unless ordered by the state or county since parents are in need.

"How are doctors and nurses and people in the healthcare field supposed to get to work if they have nowhere to take their kids?" Davis said. "... Most licensed daycares — if they're good — they're already full," she added.

The topic of responding to COVID-19 came up near the end of Wednesday night's Madison Board of School Trustees Meeting. Superintendent Jeff Studebaker called for calm in the coming weeks and said the district would close schools only if recommended by the state.

"As people, as administrators, as husbands, wives, parents, whatever — the most difficult thing that we ever do is try to walk a line — try to find a good balance between one extreme versus another and I don't see this as being any different," Superintendent Jeff Studebaker said. "…We don't need to panic. It is not a panic-worthy event. It just warrants being smart and doing things that we know we should be doing every day anyway."

District leadership and Hossler will meet again April 1 to determine the next course of action based on the situation at that time.

"We will monitor the situation one week at a time with the guidance of our local health professionals, as well as state-level officials," the joint release said.

services and arrange for home delivery

• Anyone over age 60 or with a known underlying health issue should limit their public exposure

Helpful Tip

If you can't find commercial hand sanitizer you can make your own by mixing a solution of two-third cup of at least 60% isopropyl alcohol (most bottles at the store are 70% or 99% so either will do), one-third cup aloe vera gel and a few drops of an essential oil like lavender or vanilla if you want fragrance. The alcohol kills the germs and the aloe vera keeps the alcohol from drying out your skin.

What does this change

(for now)

• Indiana schools can cancel up to 20 of the 180 school days required in an academic year and all local districts have opted to suspend classes.

• King's Daughters' Health has implemented visitation restrictions at its hospital and medical facilities to aide in the containment of COVID-19. Effective until further notice, all patients and visitors must be screened prior to entry. Hospital patient visitation will be limited to one healthy adult (age 18-over). Children under 18 are not permitted unless the child is a patient. Exceptions include end-of-life visitation and special circumstances handled on a case-by-case basis.

• Most nursing homes will restrict all visitors for the time being unless they are immediate family and the resident is in end-of-life care. All visitors will be screened before entering the facility.

• Indiana Department of Correction has suspended visitation at all facilities.

• The Jefferson County Jail is no longer accepting non-essential personnel into the facility as a precautionary measure. Incoming inmates will have their temperature checked and will be isolated if temperature is above 100.4 degrees. Visitors to inmates will also be checked and their appointments will be canceled if their temperature exceeds the same limit.

• Hanover College will suspend face-to-face classes as of Tuesday, March 17, require students to vacate dorms by March 22 and cancel all campus events, including athletics, immediately. Winter Term classes will resume online on Monday, March 30 and will continue through May 1. Seniors who need a May Term credit to graduate will have this requirement waived and students will receive prorated credit for unused dining services. Faculty and staff will still report to work as usual.

• Ivy Tech Community College is delaying the continuation of current courses and the start of new eight-week courses until March 23. All classes will be moved online until at least April 5. Facilities will remain open so students can meet with advisors, faculty, admissions and financial aide and use computers if needed.

• Jefferson Community and Technical College (including the Carrollton Campus) will move all instruction online after spring break, which runs March 16-20. The class change is effective March 14 through April 4 and staff functions will be modified to still maintain building operations.

• The Jefferson County Public Library has canceled all library programs, public events and meeting room reservations effective March 13 through mid-April. The library, both Madison and Hanover, will be open normal hours but that will be re-evaluated if conditions change. All due dates are extended to April 28 with the exception of Wi-Fi Hotspots but all fines will be forgiven. Items can be dropped off at the library book drops.

• The Indiana State School Music Association (ISSMA) has canceled all ISSMA-sponsored events through April 11, including individual events for more than 300 schools as well as the State Show Choir and Jazz Finals. The association is developing a process to allow directors of music programs to submit video recordings of performances instead.

• The Lide White Boys and Girls Club will no longer let students who attend schools ordered to close by the Jefferson County Health Department or school officials to attend the club or participate in activities there for the duration of the closure.

• Girls Inc. of Jefferson County has suspended all programming through April 6 and the center will be closed to members. Staff will continue business hours although the building will be closed. Contact Girls Inc. at 812-265-5863 for more information.

• North Madison Christian Church is canceling in-person worship services Sunday, March 15 but will livestream the 11 a.m. service on Facebook

• Prince of Peace Catholic Church will continue to celebrate services on the regularly scheduled Sunday Mass schedule. Services are at 6 p.m. Saturday evening and 8 a.m. and 10 a.m. Sunday at Prince of Peace Catholic Church, 413 East Second Street. Sunday there will also continue to be a noon Mass in Spanish at St. Patrick Chapel, 305 W. State Street. There will be no liturgical ministers or music ministers at these Masses and every effort will be made to limit contact between parishioners.

Archbishop of Indianapolis Charles C. Thompson has dispensed all Catholics in the Archdiocese from obligation to attend Sunday Mass beginning immediately and continuing until further notice. Parish members who are elderly, particularly those with underlying health conditions, and those with a compromised immune system or who are ill, are encouraged not to attend Mass.

All other parish events and gatherings will be canceled until at least April 6 when the church hopes students in Jefferson County will be able to return to school.

Trump officially declares coronavirus pandemic national emergency in U.S.

By ANDREW TAYLOR ZEKE MILLER, JILL COLVIN and LISA MASCARO
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump announced Friday that he is declaring the coronavirus pandemic a national emergency, as Washington struggles with providing Americans with relief and officials race to slow the spread of the outbreak.

Speaking from the Rose Garden, Trump said, "I am officially declaring a national emergency." He said it would free up as much as $50 billion for state and local governments to respond to the outbreak. Trump also waived interest on federally held student loans and moved to prop up energy markets, by directing the Department of Energy to buy oil to fill the strategic petroleum reserve "right up to the top."

Trump said he was also giving Secretary of Health and Human Services Alex Azar emergency authorities to waive federal regulations and laws to give doctors and hospitals "flexibility" in treating patients.

"Through a very collective action and shared sacrifice, national determination, we will overcome the threat of the virus," Trump said.

He also announced a new public-private partnership to expand coronavirus testing capabilities, as his administration has come under fire for being too slow in making the test available. The partnership will include drive-thru testing in some locations and an online portal to screen those seeking to get tested.

Still, Trump said that officials don't want people taking the test unless they have certain symptoms. "It's totally unnecessary," Trump said. He added, "This will pass."

Trump made no reference to negotiations between the White House and Congress on a broader aid package, as House Democrats prepare to vote on their own measure Friday.

Speaker Nancy Pelosi said Friday the House would approve its coronavirus aid package, imploring the Trump administration and congressional Republicans to "put families first" by backing the effort to provide Americans with relief.

The House Democratic leader spoke from the speaker's balcony at the Capitol ahead of Trump's news conference at the White House, as the power centers of Washington were shuttered to visitors.

"Our nation, our great nation has faced crisis before," Pelosi said. "And every time, thanks to the courage and optimism of the American people, we have prevailed. Now, working together, we will once again prevail."

Trump has not yet publicly backed the package, making its outcome uncertain in Congress.

Central to the package is free testing for the virus and guaranteed sick pay for workers who are taking time away from jobs, along with an infusion of dollars to handle unemployment benefits and boost food programs for children, families and seniors.

Pelosi and Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin, whom Trump tapped to negotiate for the administration, have engaged in around-the-clock negotiations.

But Republican leaders in Congress slowed the deal, wanting assurances that Trump would publicly support the agreement before signing off on it ahead of any vote, according to a top congressional aide unauthorized to discuss the private talks and speaking on condition of anonymity.

GOP leader Kevin McCarthy of California, the House minority leader, huddled with Mnuchin and Trump at the White House earlier Friday.

"We can only defeat this outbreak if we have an accurate determination of its scale and scope, so that we can pursue the precise science-based response that is necessary to put families first," Pelosi said.

The White House is under enormous pressure, dealing with the crisis on multiple fronts as it encroached ever closer on the president.

The virus has swept in alarming ways across American life, sending the financial markets into a dangerous slide and shuttering schools and sporting events and limiting everyday interactions in communities across the country.

The administration's federal task force managing the crisis was working furiously to break a bottleneck in the nation's ability to test for the new virus, and weighing what sort of emergency powers Trump would need to invoke to provide needed aid to overwhelmed state and local governments.

And a personal health scare intensified as White House officials worked to determine the level of exposure by the president and senior aides to several foreign officials who have since tested positive for the virus.

In one welcome announcement, the administration said Friday it was awarding $1.3 million to two companies trying to develop rapid COVID-19 tests that could detect within an hour whether a person is positive for the new coronavirus.

For most people, the new coronavirus causes only mild or moderate symptoms, such as fever and cough. For some, especially older adults and people with existing health problems, it can cause more severe illness, including pneumonia.

The vast majority of people recover. According to the World Health Organization, people with mild illness recover in about two weeks, while those with more severe illness may take three to six weeks to be over it.

Earlier Friday, Mnuchin sounded an optimistic note. "I think we're very close to getting this done," he said in an appearance on CNBC.

On the COVID-19 illness, Mnuchin cautioned that "people should understand the numbers are going to go up before they go down."

Pelosi and Mnuchin continued their constant cross-town phone calls throughout a tense morning of negotiations to firm up and salvage the emerging deal that has widespread support from Democrats and some in the business community seeking certainty.

Providing sick pay for workers is a crucial element of federal efforts to stop the rapid spread of the infection. Officials warn that the nation's healthcare system could quickly become overwhelmed with gravely sick patients, as suddenly happened in Italy, one of the countries hardest hit by the virus.

The ability to ensure paychecks will keep flowing — for people who stay home as a preventative measure or because they're feeling ill or caring for others — can help assure Americans they will not fall into financial hardship.

"We're in an emergency, and we're trying to respond as fast as we can," said House Appropriations Committee Chairwoman Nita Lowey, D-N.Y., as lawmakers filed in and out of Pelosi's office on Friday.

The potential deal between Congress and the White House would cap a tumultuous week in which Washington strained for a comprehensive response to an outbreak that is testing the nation's political, financial and health care systems.

Trump has struggled to show he's on top of the crisis, after giving conflicting descriptions of what the U.S. is doing to combat the virus.

The House aid package builds on an emergency $8.3 billion measure approved last week.

Pelosi promised a third coronavirus package will follow soon, though the House is leaving Washington on Friday for a previously scheduled recess. That measure will include more aggressive steps to boost the U.S. economy, which economists fear has already slipped into recession.

But there's little appetite within either party for Trump's proposal to suspend collection of the 6.2% Social Security payroll tax. States are already clamoring for fiscal relief from Washington as the virus threatens their budgets.

The coronavirus crisis also got personal for Trump and some members of Congress.

The president, his daughter Ivanka, Attorney General WIlliam Barr and lawmakers are among those who have been in contact with others who have now tested positive for the coronavirus.

Australian Home Affairs Minister Peter Dutton, now in isolation at a hospital after testing positive for the coronavirus, had returned to Sydney from Washington, where he met Barr and Ivanka Trump last week.

White House officials have not responded to questions about whether the administration officials intend to be tested or self-quarantine.

Barr, meanwhile, was staying home Friday, though he "felt great and wasn't showing any symptoms," according to his spokeswoman Kerri Kupec. She said the CDC did not recommend testing at this point.

In addition, just days after meeting Trump and Sen. Rick Scott, R-Fla., at the president's Mar-a-Lago resort, the communications chief for Brazil's president, Fábio Wajngarten, tested positive for coronavirus. Scott said he was isolating himself. Trump, 73, said he was not concerned.

GOP Sen. Lindsey Graham, who was also at Trump's club on the weekend, joined a growing list of lawmakers who have chosen to isolate themselves as a precaution. He announced Friday that he also met with the Australian official who has now tested positive. And GOP Sen. Ted Cruz of Texas, who had previously isolated himself after a potential exposure at a conservative conference in Washington, said Friday he met with a Spanish official and is now self-quarantining.

Lawmakers from both parties expressed alarm at the U.S. response, and especially over how few patients have been tested.

"We're basically, in my opinion, flying blind," said Rep. Susie Lee, D-Nev.

Dr. Anthony Fauci, infectious disease chief at the National Institutes of Health, in several television interviews Friday, said more tests would be available over the next week, but that officials should not wait before trying to mitigate the virus' effects.

"We will have considerably more testing in the future, but you don't wait for testing," Fauci said on "CBS This Morning." He said school closings and similar measures are "generally an appropriate approach."

"We're at a critical point now as we seek to blunt the rise in cases to make sure it's a hill, not a mountain," Fauci said on ABC's "Good Morning America."

OBITUARIES

Jean Collier

Jean Matson Collier, 87, of Hanover, Indiana, died Wednesday, March 11, 2020, at the River Terrace Health Campus in Madison, Indiana.

She was born March 12, 1932 in Cincinnati, to Maynard Franklin and Elizabeth Irene Yelton Matson. She was raised in Cincinnati and graduated in 1950 from Aurora High School in Aurora, Indiana.

She met former Vevay High School and Hanover College basketball coach John R. Collier at Hanover College in 1950 and they were married in 1952. His coaching career led them to Vevay and Brookville, Indiana and then back to their alma mater, Hanover College, in 1966, where he was named the men's head basketball coach. They enjoyed many years living on campus and Riverview Drive entertaining countless basketball teams, alumni reunions, supporters, former players and friends. She Loved to entertain and enjoyed opening up their home. They founded the Hanover College Basketball Camp in 1967 which is still serving many young basketball campers 54 years later. She enjoyed being a mom to countless basketball campers while they were away from home, found great joy shopping with friends, Susie and Marni, and enjoyed having beautiful flowers, playing bridge, reading, traveling, cooking, sending greeting cards and her pets. She also took pleasure in being involved with Hanover College Alumni Association, Tri Kappa and was a 50-plus year member of the Hanover Women's knitting and sewing group. She was a member of Phi Mu Sorority, Hanover United Methodist Church, the Women's Giving Circle, and was an avid bridge player. # Madison gives update on new auditorium

Board OKs cuts in presechool fee to reflect fewer hours

By COLLIN OVERTON
Courier Staff Writer

Madison Board of School Trustees previewed features of the second phase of construction on the new high school auditorium at its regular meeting Wednesday night.

Construction on the auditorium began in early 2019 after the district accepted a $4.54 million bid from Teton Corporation in October 2018. The bid also included updated HVAC, LED lighting and new roofing on the A Wing in the academic area of the high school.

A $125,862 LED wall from Pixelflex was one of features approved Wednesday along with an audio enhancement system, lighting upgrades, flooring and lighting and audio controls will cost an additional $136,162.

"We are struggling with our preschool in general in terms of just the cost of it. We've got massive costs, very little revenue coming in; it is our responsibility to make sure that we're doing the best that we can to not only provide access to kids, but to provide quality programs across board."

Madison Superintendent Jeff Studebaker

The board also approved change orders adding exterior signage, roof insulation, firewall modifications and other changes — including a reduction in price for the auditorium's acoustical blades at a total of $7,504.

The completion date for the auditorium is unknown at this time, the school district said.

Trustees also agreed to change the weekly charge for preschool from $125 to $100 a week due to a change that will reduce each day by one hour effective next school year. Superintendent Jeff Studebaker said due to financial considerations, starting next fall Madison Consolidated Preschool will remain open until the end of the school day rather than 5:30 p.m. as it has in the past.

"We are struggling with our preschool in general in terms of just the cost of it. We've got massive costs, very little revenue coming in; it is our responsibility to make sure that we're doing the best that we can to not only provide access to kids, but to provide quality programs across board," Studebaker said.

He reminded parents that the school corporation offers after-school programs at Anderson, Lydia Middleton and Deputy elementaries and buses kids to Lide White Boys and Girls Club.

During the board member comment period, Studebaker and student representative Arial Hall addressed a recent series of vaping incidents that have sent nine students and two employees to the hospital with numerous symptoms.

"I just wanted to reinforce that a large majority of the students at the high school are not participating in those activities ... we do not want to be known as that generation that's doing that, a large majority of us, I promise you," Hall said.

Studebaker echoed Hall's sentiment.

"I'd like to throw a shoutout to the students of Madison, because you're exactly right. It's just a very small handful of people that were involved in the vaping issue and that really wasn't a crisis as much as it was a media-manufactured crisis," Studebaker said.

Also at the meeting:

• The board elected to purchase a security camera system for the E.O. Muncie Learning Center at a cost of $43,957.50 from Five Star Technology Systems.

• Trustees approved the purchase of 640 Apple iPad tablets for kindergarten, first grade and second grade students in the district. The cost to the schools is $189,708.95 plus protective cases from AgiRepair for $49,770.

• The board passed a resolution expressing interest in the purchase of a parcel of property. While the resolution does not require the board to purchase anything, it is a required first step for the acquisition of property. Studbaker didn't identify the property the corporation is considering buying but did say it is not the church building next to Anderson elementary or buildings on the north or east end of the county.

• The district recognized Isaac Boone for earning Lily Endowment Community Scholar honors and 27 Madison FFA students for their placement in state competitions.

In Loving Memory

Carol Jean (Wallace) Hackney

May 15, 1954 ~ March 5, 2020

Carol Jean (Wallace) Hackney, 65, went to be with her Savior Jesus Christ on March 5th, 2020 in Scottsdale, AZ. She was surrounded by her family, whom she loved and served with all her heart. She shared 44 years of marriage with her beloved husband Ed.

Carol was born May 15, 1954 to Bob and Nellie Wallace, growing up in the small town of Madison, IN. She married Ed Hackney on July 12, 1975 and graduated from Indiana University with a BA in Political Science in 1977.

Besides her husband Ed, she is survived by her sister, Robyn (Chris) Brown, her three children, Jordan (Tasha) Hackney, Drew (Shauna) Hackney, Kendall (Udeme) Udofia, and three grandchildren, Hope, Josiah, and Gemma, one nephew, Chad Kiel and her uncle, Charles (Susan) Horton.

Carol exemplified Philippians 2:3 which says "Do nothing out of selfish ambition or vain conceit. Rather, in humility value others above yourselves." She was a servant to all and lived as a true witness to Jesus Christ. She was led to Christ by her Father and Mother, leaving a legacy of joy as a member of Scottsdale Bible Church and attending the Community Connections Class. She touched many people with her love during in time in Indiana, Ohio, California, and the four years she lived in Scottsdale.

Hospitality was her mission field, serving Christ through serving others. Carol faithfully prayed for others and invested in the lives of those around her; her Godly advice and loving example will be missed by all who knew her. Carol was a loving wife, sister, mother, and Nana, who proudly exercised her license to spoil her grandchildren. She was as beautiful on the inside as she was outside.

Our family would love to hear how Carol touched your life; if you would like to share a story or picture, please send it (along with your name) to CJHMemories@outlook.com.

Carol loved the Colton Cowell Foundation which serves sick children. In lieu of flowers please consider a donation in memory of Carol. While there is no "in memory" designation for online donations, the Colton Cowell Foundation is recognizing all online donations on behalf of Carol and will contact you to confirm. There will be an evening visitation on Thursday, March 12th from 4-7pm at Scottsdale Bible Church at the Grace Chapel, 7601 E Shea Blvd, Scottsdale, AZ 85260. The Celebration of Life will be on Friday, March 13th at 10am with a reception to follow at Scottsdale Bible Church at the Grace Chapel, 7601 E Shea Blvd, Scottsdale, AZ 85260. The arrangements are being managed by Hansen Desert Hills Mortuary and Cemetery, 6500 E Bell Rd, Scottsdale, AZ 85254, (480) 991-5800 (https://www.hansenmortuary.com/) .

NCAA decision ends Crozier's season early; Hanover cancels all spring sports

END OF THE ROAD: Former Madison Cub Olivia Crozier, shown in action earlier this season against Kentucky, saw her season end on Thursday when the NCAA made the decision to cancel the women's basketball tournament. Crozier's Samford Bulldogs had qualified for the tournament for the first time since 2012. (Courier file photo by David Campbell)

Olivia Crozier said when she heard Thursday that the NCAA had canceled this year's Men's and Women's Division I Basketball Tournaments, it brought her to tears. But unlike millions of fans across the country lamenting that decision, Crozier had a personal stake in the game.

Crozier, a 2015 Madison Consolidated High School graduate, is a fifth-year senior at Samford University, where the Bulldogs' women's basketball team earned its third-ever bid to the "Big Dance" and first since 2012. A reserve center, Crozier was looking forward to capping her college career in style.

"I'm literally sick to my stomach. One of my teammates said to look at the bright side, at least we get to go out as winners," Crozier said Thursday evening. "But at the same time, people worked for this and the NCAA Tournament is a once in a lifetime experience, especially for the seniors ... For us seniors, it was like we had just played in our last game and we had no idea."

Cancellation of the NCAA Tournaments were just one part of a topsy-turvy day in sports as leagues and entities braced themselves against the effects of the COVID-19 virus, or Coronavirus. The NBA and NHL suspended their seasons indefinitely, Major League Baseball opted to shut down spring training and push the start of the regular season back several weeks, and the new XFL football league canceled the rest of its regular season.

Fears over the threat of spreading the virus even extended to the IHSAA, which has opted to postpone its boys basketball regional tournaments this weekend. IHSAA Commissioner Bobby Cox said the decision on whether to cancel spring events would be left up to the individual schools.

Locally, Jefferson County schools will be closed until April 5 and all sporting events will be postponed until that date.

Trimble County has canceled all athletic activities until March 27 and a KHSAA moratorium has canceled all events until April 12.

The Lide White Memorial Boys & Girls Club, which has normally been open during times of school-wide sickness, has changed that policy and will not allow any child whose school has been closed due to illness or preventative measures to attend the club, including all sporting activities.

Hanover College has followed the NCAA's lead and has canceled all campus activites through the end of the spring season. All students have until March 22 to vacate campus and as a result, all sports events have been canceled.

The men's NCAA basketball tournament was scheduled to begin on Tuesday with the women starting next Saturday. After going 18-14 and winning the Southern Conference regular season and tournament championships, Samford was preparing for its one shining moment.

Initially, the NCAA had decided to play the first two rounds with no spectators other than immediate family and essential personal. But on Thursday, the organization changed its mind.

Crozier said that she found out just like everybody else, on Twitter, and it wasn't a decision that sat well with her.

"What really sucks is that we didn't get a chance to find out from our

Defenders close season at nationals

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Christian Academy of Madison boys basketball wrapped up the 2019-20 season playing in the national tournament in Dayton, Tennessee, last weekend.

The Defenders went 2-2 over the four games. CAM opened the tournament with a 77-41 win over Christian Ministries (Ark.) on Wednesday, March 4 and then lost 63-60 to Hendersonville (Ky.) on Thursday. On Friday, CAM defeated Tri-State (Calif.) 63-43 and lost 50-41 to Bethel Christian (Ky.).

Sophomore Clay Carter was named to the Division 7 All-Tournament Team after averaging 20 points, five rebounds, four assists and four steals for the tournament.

Rebs' Mitchell Cline signs with Indiana St.

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

One of the best pure athletes to ever walk the halls at Southwestern High School, Mitchell Cline, has been a proven success at whatever sport he chooses to play.

But it is track & field where Cline has excelled. Later this spring he will attempt to become the first Rebel in school history to win an individual state championship.

That ability made Cline a target of several colleges and on Saturday he officially signed to run track at Indiana State University.

"I've been pretty excited about it," Cline said. "I've been talking to the coaches on and off and they seem excited too. That's reassuring."

Cline had already made a name for himself in both soccer and wrestling. As a goalie and a midfielder, Cline was one of the best players in the area and he reached the semistate twice in wrestling before deciding to give basketball a shot this winter where he started 20 games.

But it is his success on the track that has stood out. He finished 10th in the 400-meter dash state finals last year and could qualify for the state finals in several other events.

After having spent all school year playing multiple sports, Cline admitted that it will be weird to concentrate on just one.

"I tried to keep the basketball season dragging out because now for the next four years I'll be doing just track," said Cline, who plans to major in law enforcement. "But I know coming home me and my cousins will be able to do whatever we want and that won't be too bad."

Southwestern track & field coach Zac Nussbaum said that while Cline is a natural athlete, he only recently took up the sport and can't wait to see what he accomplishes in the future.

"He's got to be one of the most gifted athletes we've ever had come through here," Nussbaum said. "But I think something that people don't realize is, he is also one of the hardest workers. I wish I had grabbed him in junior high; this is only his fourth year running the sport. It's pretty incredible what he has been able to do in just four years."

Five of the nine athletes who finished ahead of Cline in the 400 state finals last year graduated, including his chief local rival Daunte O'Banion of Madison, who placed fifth. Cline finished just one-tenth of a second out of a medal a year ago and has already declared that to be his primary goal this year.

"I want to get that medal, that's the big thing for me," Cline said. "And who knows? I get a little faster and improve, maybe I can win that state title as well."

HANOVER ROUNDUP

Baseball, men's lacrosse wrap up season

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

A two-base error in the bottom of the ninth inning lifted Hanover baseball to a 4-3 win over visiting Eureka (Ill.) on Wednesday in what proved to be the team's final game of the season.

The Panthers entered the final inning trailing 3-2 but Charlie Burton and Jake Schaefer each reached on hits and Schaefer stole second to put two runners in scoring position.

Jay Lorenz then pinch-hit for Matt Vetor and laced a shot to third base, which was misplayed by the third baseman and both Burton and Schaefer walked home with the winning runs.

Burton was 2-for-4 with a home run, an RBI and two runs scored to lead Hanover's offense while Mark Walkenhorst, Brayden Imel and Drew Kelly each added hits. Imel also drove in a run.

Eli Copner (1-3) picked up the win with an inning and a third of scoreless relief while striking out three. Hayden McIlwain scattered three runs on six hits with three strikeouts over the first seven and two-thirds innings.

Because of concerns related to the COVID-19 virus, Hanover College has canceled all remaining spring events, including sporting events. As a result, Hanover ends the season with a 7-7 record.

Lacrosse falls to Transy

Hanover's men's lacrosse team opened Heartland College Lacrosse Conference play with a 19-9 loss at home to Transylvania (Ky.) on Wednesday in what proved to be the team's final game of the season.

The visiting Pioneers blew open the game early, jumping out to a 9-1 lead after the first quarter and never looking back.

Eric Hopkins had three goals to lead Hanover while Dallas Fonner had a goal — the 100th of his career — and two assists. Ian Kimmins and Noah King each had a goal and an assist while Patrick Boylston, Josh Perkins and Dirk Meinhart all scored a goal.

Sean O'Meara stopped 17 shots in goal for the Panthers.

Because of concerns related to the COVID-19 virus, Hanover College has canceled all remaining spring events, including sporting events. As a result, Hanover ends the season with a 2-5 record.

coach, we found out on Twitter when they announced it," Crozier said. "It would have been nice to have had a note from her first but she never had the chance."

Unlike most student-athletes, Crozier not only has skin in the game as a player, she is also a registered nurse who will begin working at the University of Alabama-Birmingham Medical Center on March 30. As a nurse, Crozier saw the steps that the NCAA and others were taking to stop the spread of the virus as necessary, but the student-athlete in her didn't necessarily agree.

"I fully understand what they are doing. The best way to stop the spread of this is to limit big crowds and limit exposure. One person could come to one of these games and infect 100 people and that's just unacceptable," Crozier said. "I would have been OK with playing the games with nobody in the gym and allowing people to watch it on TV. That way the games could go on and the players would get a chance to live out their dreams. I understand what they're doing and it's even the right thing, but that doesn't mean that I have to like it."

Tough love is tough for parents of 20-year-old still at home

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: My wife and I have a 20-year-old son, "Joe," who has "failure to launch" syndrome. He coasted through high school, smoked pot, played video games and did the minimum to get by. After graduation, we agreed he could work part time and go to college, while living at home, although I would have preferred he work full time or join the service.

He took no classes over the summer and continued his part-time job delivering pizza for less than minimum wage and tips. Most days, he started work at 4:00 in the afternoon, and he got into the habit of coming home at 10:00 p.m., playing video games and/or partying with friends until 4 in the morning, and then sleeping or staying in bed until thirty minutes before work. If he was not scheduled for work, he would end up in the basement playing video games.

He successfully completed one college course in January. He started his second class in September and withdrew by October. He figured out college "was not for him." We told him he had to get a full-time job. The late-night partying and video games continued until December when we insisted he stop smoking pot and apply for jobs. Surprisingly, he ditched his friends, quit pot and became a different person who was more outgoing and would talk with us.

Unfortunately, this didn't last more than four weeks. He never actually applied for any jobs and started partying with his friends again. At the end of January, my wife and I had had enough. I told Joe he had to have a full-time job by the end of March, or he had to move out.

Fast-forward to today: My wife doesn't want to kick Joe out because he told her he has no place to go.

At 20, I want Joe to grow up. I tell my wife that we have enabled his lifestyle for long enough and Joe needs an ultimatum to learn.

Since this is one of a few things my wife and I disagree on, we both agree we would follow your advice. By the way, Joe has refused individual counseling, and I know he wouldn't show up if he had a scheduled appointment. — Failure-to-Launch Father

Dear Failure-to-Launch Father: Tough love is tough to give, but that's what's needed here. The best thing you can do as Joe's parents is to stop enabling his self-destructive behavior. Stick with your deadline for his moving out. It's the right thing to do, though it might feel wrong. Consider attending therapy and Nar-Anon or Al-Anon to learn how to detach from Joe's situation. To quote Melody Beattie: "Detaching does not mean we don't care. It means we learn to love, care, and be involved without going crazy." Beattie's book "Codependent No More" might be helpful during this time, as well.

Dear Annie: I have licked my knife after meals all my life. Whenever my friend "Jill" and I are at a restaurant together, she tells me how gross it is and looks away. Doesn't everyone do this? — On the Edge

Dear Edge: Appearances aside, this just sounds dangerous. Even a butter knife could do some damage to your tongue. Why not scrape the food off your knife with your fork instead? It's safer and more sightly.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! Annie Lane's debut book — featuring favorite columns on love, friendship, family and etiquette — is available as a paperback and e-book. Go to http://www.creators-publishing.com for more information. Send your questions for Annie Lane to dearannie@creators.com.

BRIDGE

THE CHRISTMAS COMPETITION WINNERS

There were several excellent entries to my Christmas Competition, and the winner by a whisker was Mukesh Ghatiya from Bengaluru, India. Congratulations. The runners-up were Steven Glaser of Holladay, Utah; John Harvey of Mount Hope, Canada (a winner in 2016); Ben Hawn of Lancaster, Pennsylvania (last year's winner); and Stanley Lipnick of Naples, Florida.

Bridge is full of maxims that are not right all of the time. However, there is one play technique that always works -- unless (sorry!) you don't have the entries to carry it out. What is this technique?

Against South's contract of three no-trump, West led the club king, and East encouraged with the nine. How should declarer have planned the play?

North should have overcalled one no-trump, not risked reaching a 4-2 club fit. South upgraded to two no-trump because of his excellent spot-cards.

From the bidding, South knew that West had to hold the heart king and spade ace. Therefore, he ducked the first club trick, but when West continued with the club two to his partner's jack, declarer won with his ace. (He could have ducked again, planning to win immediately with the ace if East switched to a heart.)

Next, South knew to lead toward honor combinations. He played a low spade toward dummy, putting up the queen when West played low. Declarer returned to hand with a diamond to the jack for the lead of a second low spade. Here, West had to play the ace on thin air, giving South three spade tricks and nine in all. The defenders took only one spade and three clubs.

New Hanover provost

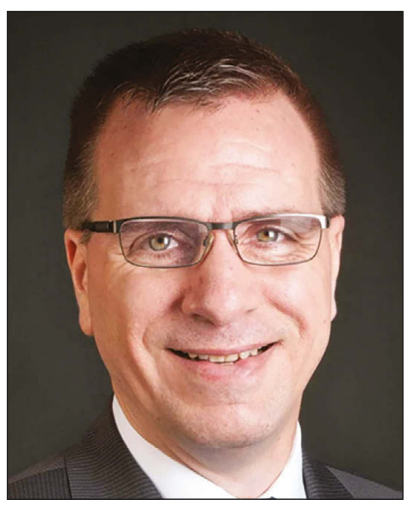
Hanover College has announced the appointment of Carey Adams, Ph.D., as its new provost and vice president for academic affairs.

Adams has an extensive background in higher education and small liberal arts colleges. He was most recently the Vice President for Academic Affairs at Fontbonne University in St. Louis.

Previously, Adams served as provost and vice president for academic affairs at Armstrong State University and dean of the College of Arts and Letters at Missouri State University. Adams earned his doctorate in communications from the University of Kansas, his master's degree in communications from Baylor and his bachelor's degree from William Jewell College.

"We are thrilled to be adding such an experienced and talented administrator in the critical role of provost," said Lake Lambert, president of Hanover College. "Dr. Adams will be instrumental in helping Hanover prepare for its third century by providing guidance and leadership to our faculty and for our academic programs."



Carey Adams

"I could not be more excited to be joining Hanover College — an institution that is highly regarded and poised for even greater success," said Adams. "It's an honor to be tapped for such a vital position that comes at a critical time in higher education landscape. I have no doubt that under President Lambert's leadership, Hanover will continue to grow and thrive."

Adams will begin at Hanover June 22.

Sizemore on President's list

Olivia Sizemore of Vevay, Indiana, was named to The University of Alabama president's list for the Fall 2019 semester. To make the president's list, a student must have an academic record of 4.0 and must be a full-time student. The University of Alabama is the state's oldest and largest public institution of higher education.

Hoosier State

Courier staff report

Juniors Trey Suggett and Abigail Hill from Shawe Jr./Sr. High School were selected as delegates for Hoosier Boys State and Hoosier Girls State.

Each year, boys and girls from around Indiana are chosen to participate in Hoosier State, a week long program sponsored by the American Legion and American Legion Auxiliary. Throughout this program, participants can learn more about Indiana state government. Hoosier Boys State and Hoosier Girls State split participants into two made-up parties who will participate in elections, propose laws, negotiate bills and enforce the established legislation from the local level up to the state level.

Participants are chosen through a number of criteria, including leadership, honesty, good character, showing proper respect to the U.S. Flag and having love for God and Country. Hoosier Boys State and Hoosier Girls State will be hosted at Trine University this coming summer.

Trey Suggett

Abigail Hill

Trey Suggett, son of Robert and Beth Suggett of Madison, will participate in Hoosier Boys State while Abigail Hill, daughter of Chris and Natalie Hill of Madison, will participate in Hoosier Girls State. This year, the Major Samuel Woodfill American Legion Post No. 9 helped sponsor the boys delegate while the American Legion Auxiliary Unit 9 helped sponsor the girls delegate.

Smyrna Homemakers

The Smyrna Homemakers met Feb. 19 at Resurrection Lutheran Church for a pitch-in meal and meeting.

15 members attended and the meeting began with the Pledge of Allegiance and the Club Creed by President Glenda Schirmer. Roll call was answered with the question "Pick your favorite cold meal."

The secretary report by Wanda Stewart was approved and the treasurer report was given by Jane Wilson. A brochure on life skills was given to all. Members also discussed a diet to treat cancer and heart healthy food.

Old business included advertising for the Quilt Show. A topic of interest was the possibility of selling food at the Quilt Show. June Chatham then read about scams.

If you are interested in joining a Homemakers Club, call the county office at 812-265-8919. The next pitch-in meal will be at noon, March 18 at Resurrection Lutheran Church.

Sunshine Homemakers

The Sunshine Homemakers met at the home of Dorothy Morgan on Feb. 12 at 2 p.m. Morgan led the meeting with the Pledge of Allegiance and the Homemakers Creed. Roll Call was answered with "What is your funniest commercial?" The thought of the month was "We cannot help everyone but everyone can help someone," by Ronald Reagan. Members then sang the song "Jesus Loves the Little Children." The lesson covered was called "Life Skills 101." Marie Black gave the secretary's report and gave devotions from John 3:16. Upcoming events include the the Quilt Show April 17 and 18 at the Jefferson County 4-H Fairgrounds. The next meeting will be March 11.
